The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime, looking wild and thin. He tells Aunt Polly all about his adventures. Daring supper, Aunt Polly asks, “What have you been doing?” Tom replies, “I’ve been out of school that whole time, and I’ve been out in the country with Huckleberry Finn. We had a fine time, Aunt Polly.” Aunt Polly is exasperated. Tom has sworn the boy to secrecy about his ventures, but Aunt Polly is determined to find out what he has been up to. Tom’s half-brother, Sid, who has been left at home, is out looking for Tom. Tom asks Sid to draw himself a picture and show it to Aunt Polly.

Tom goes out of the house into the woods andk down to the Wayside Inn. Heorders a drink and eventually chooses the nearest of the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. As passers-by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of missile. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom comes home at supper. Aunt Polly is satisfied. She tells him that he will be skipped school that afternoon and sent to confession. However, when he gets there, he finds nothing but the usual recitation, and is sent home with a knapsack of books. Tom goes out of the house to play, and soon returns to find Aunt Polly sitting in the shade under the apple tree, smoking a pipe. Tom, with a sidelong glance, says, "Hello, Aunt Polly." Aunt Polly is satisfied. She tells him that he will not be whipped the next day, but will be put to light work. Tom claps his hands, and says, "That's all right!"
