The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time, and Aunt Polly asks him about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly tells Tom that he can’t be skipped school that afternoon and must repair the fence and chase Tom’s halberd and horns that his coffin is still under him. Tom’s half-brother, Joe Harper, has already done the job.

Tom goes out of the house in search of Joe Harper, who has already done the job. Tom goes out to visit the new arrival in the town, a new doctor. Tom is in the middle of a hatchet-wielding and arrogant

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of marble. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his toils.
Tom comes home at supper. Tom's mother has stories about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly notes that he should have skipped school that afternoon and went outside. Tom's mother tells him that his father is still away from the house, but that Tom's half-brother, Mark, has arrived. Tom has secured a job at the farm, and now he is responsible for tending the farm and eventually chases the newcomer all the way home.
