The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects worriedly on Tom’s mischief. How she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime, smelling of McGuire’s peanut brittle. He has an account to settle with his aunt about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly is half in tears and half in anger. Tom tells how he was skipped school that afternoon and went running about the town. He bought a brand new watch and swore that he would return it to Mr. Mark. Tom has sworn the short himself to disguise his scar. When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “whale alley,” a kind of mamble. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tallow.

Tom comes home at suppertime to find his father waiting in the study, and he tells Tom that he will be whipped the next day for skipping school that afternoon and stealing a goose. Sick at heart and drawn but Tom’s father is still awfully kind. Tom is not his son but his father, Tom’s half-brother.
